

SubQ Method

Subcutaneous (under the skin), or SubQ delivery of immunoglobulin replacement therapy is an alternative to traditional IVig therapy for patients with primary immune deficiency disorders ...especially those with insufficient venous access, adverse reactions to intravenous treatments, or time constraints.

SubQ therapy delivers immunoglobulin through a small needle placed just beneath the skin. SubQ can be administered anywhere you can 'pinch an inch'. Thighs, upper arms, stomach or hips are the most common infusion sites and can be easily rotated.

Here's what our SubQ patients are saying:

"I have to thank everyone from BioRx for helping me make the switch from IVIG to Sub-Q. It has changed my life so much; I love it. My illness is finally more in my control. Thank you!"

— Mandy B, 29-year-old mother with hypogammaglobulinemia, who switched successfully from IVIG to Subcutaneous IgG therapy with BioRx

Patients may receive their initial dose(s) in a physician's office or receive training by a nurse in their home until they gain a level of comfort to self-administer the therapy (A patient is usually trained in 1-4 sessions).

Let SubQ and BioRx help you!

Call BioRx today to improve your quality of life.

800-559-3173

SubQ Method (cont.)

Advantages of SubQ:

Fewer infections

Steady serum levels and more frequent treatments using Sub Q result in fewer infections

Minimal side effects

(Most common side effects are) site reactions, such as swelling, itching or redness, which can be treated easily and usually decrease substantially after repeated use

Mobility

Administering the dose with a small, portable pump allows patient to move about freely and perform normal activities, watch TV, or sleep.

More time for self

Home treatment equals fewer visits to Dr or hospital, less time away from school or work and more time for self.

Reduced treatment costs

Sub Q reduces treatment costs, as well as travel costs to the hospital or doctor's office.

Improved Quality of Life

Patient experiences better health, fewer infections, and improved lifestyle.

Let SubQ and BioRx help you!

Call BioRx today to improve your quality of life.

800-559-3173

